

KAMI BURNS

Dear Friends and Family,

I've recently gotten back from a great week in Puebla, Mexico! As I finish raising my support, I'm working at Atlanta Christian College, but the school was kind enough to let me spend a week south of the border for Mexico's Independence Day, El Pozo's (campus ministry) Open Mic Night, and most importantly, the ministry's fall retreat to La Malinche – a volcano we see off in the distance every day in Puebla.

This week was wonderful ... the best part was how life felt so normal even just visiting for a week. I got to surprise a few friends from my days as an exchange student. I played a little flag football right after getting off the airplane, and even did some normal life stuff like make a Costco run and watch some NFL games on Sunday. To spend a week in Puebla was an incredible gift. So, when I think about spending the next several years there, I realize how blessed I am to soon be a part of what God is doing in the lives of Mexican university students.

Speaking of which, I'm getting close to fulfilling the commitments of my monthly budget. I have less than $1,500 a month left to raise, which may seem daunting but actually isn't scary at all in comparison to how much God has already provided. Please keep remembering me and El Pozo in your prayers. If you, your family, your church, or your small group/Sunday school class would be interested in partnering with El Pozo financially, please don't hesitate to contact me via phone (770.883.6413) or email (kamiburns@cmfmissionary.org). Also, stay tuned for updates in my progress at <http://kamiburns.cmfmissionary.org>, and check out El Pozo's new website at <http://www.elpozopuebla.org>! Thank you for being a huge part of this exciting journey to Mexico!

Much love,

Kami Burns
